Technology is disrupting financial services at an unprecedented pace. In this course, we discuss which areas have already been disrupted.

Leading experts open a window into blockchain and machine learning, the emerging technologies that facilitate this disruption.

We zoom in on emerging new actors in the financial services sector. Both start-ups and big tech platforms now provide high-value financial services and challenge incumbents.

Finally, we show how traditional financial institutions have successfully partnered with emerging FinTechs and how current trends are shaping the financial services industry 10-15 years from today.
